I recommend you buy a comprehensive Nikon D750 guide book and use that instead of the Nikon-provided manual. The manual that comes with the camera is far too confusing and it doesn't really teach you anything about DSLR photography. All it does is explain what each function does, which is sometimes not enough to make you understand why you need to do something a certain way. Auto and scene ...

I'm a Nikon shooter so I'll have to mention the 14-24 2.8. It's costly but I opted for this instead of a fisheye to use on my D700. It's incredibly sharp and I don't have to worry about any edge distortion. I love that I'm able to get some pretty dramatic images due to how wide it is. Thanks for the article. Very informative. :o)
